What is: IMO, MED, Wheelmark, SOLAS, FTP, MCA, USCG number?

There is a huge amount of jargon but to simplify things this is the easiest way to understand it.

1. The IMO governs the Fire Safety rules for international waters
2. SOLAS sets the safety standard for the IMO who publish the FTP
3. MED sets the standards for Europe (EU) which incorporates the IMO standards
4. In addition to the IMO standards the MED stipulates a need for quality assurance and consistency in product and production
5. The Wheelmark is the sign of compliance to the MED Fire Safety Standards and thus IMO too
6. In the UK the MCA is the agency responsible for ensuring that companies adhere to the MED standards and issues the Wheelmark as a mark of compliance
7. The USCG number is the USA equivalent of the MED.

It’s the Law!
- To be legal in International waters your mattresses needs to comply with the IMO standards
- All EU registered vessels must have Wheelmarked Mattresses
- In the USA all mattresses must have a US Coast Guard Number.

Ship Shape IMO Mattresses are compliant with all three!

Acronyms: SOLAS (Safety of Life At Sea), IMO (International Maritime Organisation), MED (Marine Equipment Directive), FTP (The IMO’s Fire Test Procedures), MCA (Maritime and Coastguard Agency)
Ship Shape International Mattress Operations range of mattresses are compliant with IMO regulations and are endorsed with the MED Wheelmark and carry the US Coastguard Number. They are a legal requirement in international, US and European waters.

“What Makes a Good Mattress?”

A mattress's job is to provide a supportive, comfortable layer for you to sleep on. It must allow your hips and shoulders to sink in sufficiently so that your spine can remain supported and straight while lying on your side.

Too firm a mattress and your body will be supported on your hips and shoulders leaving your spine sagging.

Too soft and thin and you will have pressure points on your body and again leaving the back unsupported.

In addition the mattress must breath exceptionally well allowing your perspiration to move freely away from your body, leaving you comfortable and dry even on the warmest of nights.

“Sleep Well - Be Safe”

For effective and safe running of a ship it is vital that officers and crew are well rested. This is not a luxury. Well rested crew are more alert, vigilant and effective in the tasks at hand.
